Dear Parent / Carer

We recently sent a letter to accompany student revision guides, regarding preparation for the end of year examinations. In this we mentioned the importance of examinations to the future prospects of our students and how the level of success in examination would probably have an impact on the 'type of home you live in, car you drive and holidays you can afford'. Our intention by using this phrase was simply to illustrate how important examinations are potentially to some future pathways and to encourage our students to work as hard as possible in order to achieve their full potential. Our ethos has always been to support every single child in their aspirations, leaving no child behind, and will continue to be so.

We apologise if this has caused any offence.

Yours faithfully
